Mayor calls on public to change attitude of reluctance to undergo health screening

PEOPLE need to change their attitude of reluctance to undergo health screenings as early detection of diseases offer the best chance for recovery, Kuching Mayor James Chan said.

He said many people did not take the first step to go for screening due to fear, ignorance or cost.

Chan also said due to the misconception that a serious illness is bound to be incurable. So they adopt an 'I'd better not know' mentality. 'What I don't know will not hurt me.'

But this is very dangerous. By the time a disease is discovered, it might be too late, he said when opening a talk organised by Great Eastern Life Assurance (Malaysia) Bhd in Kuching yesterday.

Seeking his support for events which educate the public on health-related issues, Chan called on insurance companies to organise more such activities.

'Insurance companies should not think of profit all the time. They should hold more health awareness events and activities like walks to encourage people to adopt a healthy lifestyle,' he said.

Mayor Chan wants a healthy city too

ANNE CHENG

KUCHING: The Mayor of Kuching City South Council, James Chan, not only wanted a clean city but also a healthy city.

One of his projects to the community was to create health awareness to Kuching city folk and yesterday his project on cervical cancer was held at Bintawa.

Jointly organised with Lalla Cancer Charitable Trust, Normah Medical Specialist Centre, Bintawa Community Association and Kuching Fishing Hook Association, a doctor from Normah Medical Specialist Centre, Dr. Kho Lay Hing, gave a talk on the prevention and early diagnosis of cervical cancer. A free pap smear was also held.

In his speech, Chan revealed that from the National Cancer Registry of 2003, breast cancer accounted for 31% of all newly diagnosed cancer in women in an incidence of 46.2 cases per 100,000 population.

Cervical cancer, he said, was the second most common cancer among women which constituted another 12.9%

Chan (4th left) with Kho and Chairman of Bintawa Community Association, Tan Kok Chiang, at the function.

Increase of 19.7 cases per 100,000 populations.

He pointed out that the solution started with community awareness, knowledge and attitude among people. He said with early detection, cancer could be overcome.

'The person to prevent the disease started from each individual,' he added.

Chan had organised talk on other diseases in Tabuan in cleaning campaign to audience.

He said the next target would be his own staff members and other NGOs are welcomed to join.

After this project, Chan said he would welcome NGOs like Lion's Club, Rotary, Jaycees or associations to come forward to team up with the Kuching City South to hold more health awareness programmes.

Major crimes in MBKS areas down in first four months

KUCHING: Some areas within the jurisdiction of Kuching City South Council (MBKS) have recorded a major drop in crimes for the first four months this year compared to the corresponding period in 2018.

With only 185 cases of both violent and property crime, the rate is 70 per cent less than from January to April last year at 722 cases. Kenyalang Park recorded the highest number of cases last year (Jan - April) of 204 cases followed by Tabuan Jaya (133 cases), Jalan Abell/Padungan (96), Pendang/Jalan Kwong Lee Bank (66), RH Plaza/Jalan Lapangan Terbang (48), Jalan Song Thian Cheok (41), Petanak Market (40), Travillion Mall (38), Jalan Rock (23), Crown Square (9) and Jalan Hock Lee (5).

For the corresponding period this year, Kenyalang Park registered 105 cases, Tabuan Jaya (46), Jalan Abell/Padungan (23), Pendang/Jalan Kwong Lee Bank (13), RH Plaza/Jalan Lapangan Terbang (2), Jalan Song Thian Cheok (13), Petanak Market (8), Travillion Mall (8), Jalan Rock (14), Crown Square (5) and Jalan Hock Lee (5).

This was revealed by Kuching Crime Investigation Department (CID) superintendent inspector Simon Low yesterday.

He pointed out that more than 90 per cent of crimes in Snatch thefts also made up a lot of cases with 48.13 per cent of them committed from 12 noon to 6pm when many people have banking and commercial activities.

Kuching Crime Investigation Department (CID) superintendent inspector Simon Low the city were property thefts and losses. "Snatch thefts also made up a lot of cases with 48.13 per cent of them committed from 12 noon to 6pm when many people have banking and commercial activities," he said during a crime prevention dialogue at MBKS auditorium here.

In Kuching, Low said, a policeman had to look after 597 residents and this ratio showed that police here shouldered three times more workload as far as Interpol standards were concerned.

"The one to 597 police-residents ratio means that we have three times more work to do because the Interpol standard ratio is one to 250," said Low, adding that there were 1,005 policemen to take care of 600,000 people in the city.

He was quick to add that the Royal Malaysian Police (RMP) now had a five-year strategic plan to beef up the efficiency of crime-solving via training more personnel to increase manpower and skills.

On vehicle thefts, he urged owners to properly lock their vehicles and not to leave their cars unattended, not even a second.

"Never underestimate the few seconds or minutes that you leave your car unattended because this is the opportunity you are giving to criminals."

"All a criminal needs are opportunities and targets."

According to him, automobile thieves have four to five routes to transport stolen vehicles out of Sarawak.

"Stolen cars can be driven to Lundu, Bau, Serian, Lubok Antu and Kuching Samarahan. We must not forget 'Jalan Tikus' along the borders like Tebedu and Serikin."

"Once a car is stolen, you cannot expect police to close all these roads," he explained.

He hoped that owners of vehicles, be they saloon cars, four-wheel drive (4WD) or motorbikes, should be more mindful of their properties like installing extra locks as security measures against thefts.

Mayor: Let's fight crime together

Cheng Peter Sibon

KUCHING: There is a need for community to come forward and help the Police fight crime and achieve the goal of living in a conducive, safe and crime-free environment in the city. "Crime prevention is a key strategy. It has been effective because the community fully supports it. of our greatest assets in our fight against crime. It sets us apart from some other jurisdictions where there is a deep distrust between citizens and the Police," said Chan. He stressed that the Council and the Police would continue to engage its stakeholders and partners to promote security awareness and crime prevention practices. "However, the best programmes would not be sufficient if members of the public do not remain vigilant. All of us must not unwittingly allow crime to happen, and by bearing in mind the following simple steps, we can help to reduce crime," advised ing care only of one's own premises but to watch out for the neighbours as well. "Mutual acts of neighbourliness send a strong signal of solidarity against crime and would help to deter criminals," said Chan. He also cautioned members of the public not to become an easy target of criminals. Some of the ways he suggested were strengthening of home security devices and not to draw attention by carrying large sum of money or don't outfit with expensive jewellery. "Finally, crime prevention is everybody's business. Alert the Police immediately upon discovering a crime so that the Police

Harmony, bonding - pillars of a socially cohesive city: Mayor

KUCHING Community harmony and bonding are important pillars in ensuring that Kuching remains a socially cohesive city, said Mayor James Chan.

"As a small city, these are vital factors for Kuching to continue to be successful at the economic front.

"The key to social cohesion is continuous interaction among the various groups which in turn will lead to bonding and emergence of social networks.

"Social networks are organic in nature and can grow out of a variety of circumstances," Chan said in his speech at the opening of the MBKS community programme officiated by Chief Minister Pehin Sri Haji Abdul Taib Mahmud at the Tabuan Jaya Neighbourhood Park here yesterday.

Many among the elderly folk, according to the Mayor, would tell stories of how different communities co-existed harmoniously in the villages, and how through daily interaction, the villagers felt they belonged to a community where there was much to be gained.

"We ought to strengthen the social networks. Every Kuchingite must be made to feel that they are part of the community.

"Therefore, we must continue to build bridges across communities, strengthen social cohesion, and create a unique community out of the various groups in Kuching," Chan added.

Chan said the community event was a fine example of MBKS working together with associations, non-governmental organisations as well as the Tabuan Jaya grassroots, in its effort to create an active, vibrant and livable working environment, and to imbue in the residents a greater sense of belonging to the community.

He said the theme "My City My Home" could be developed and strengthened by establishing local communication networks and keeping the residents up to date with happenings in their area.

He added that social outreach programmes that could strengthen the fabric of society and fostering values such as generosity, compassion and support for others should be created.

Chan stressed that MBKS always valued the youth, as shown during the last three years when priority was given to them to run and manage their business during the city festivals.

Under the neighbourliness programme, explained Chan, the city council has been carrying out various productive activities that are beneficial to the youth.

KUCHING - Every year, the wide open fields of Kuching City Fest are filled with kites of all shapes and sizes, as the annual Kuching Festival Kite Display competition gets underway.

Organised by Kuching South City Council (KSCC), the competition attracted hobbyists as well as members of the public from all over the city over the past three days.

Weather conditions were just right yesterday morning as kite enthusiasts took their handmade and unique kite creations to the skies. Unfortunately, heavy rain later in the afternoon did a damper to their activities. One group in particular stood out with their large and colourful kite designs at the event.

Founded in 2008, the Kuching Kite Flyers Association brought with them some 20 kites to display throughout the day, with the longest spanning 2.5m in diameter.

The huge rainbow-coloured creation with a long kite design dazzled all others in the sky. It also took a bit of skill to launch.

"It's great to get together like this, as a group and do something we all enjoy, such as kite flying," said Kuching Kite Flyers Association president secretary Gabriel Addad.

"We've brought all kinds of kites to display here, including fast moving stunt kites and team kites adorned with all sorts of patterns. I would like to see more members of the public taking part in kite flying in the future, simply because it's such a healthy, fun, social activity that anyone can participate in," he said.

"I have two young boys of my own, but kids these days are more interested in computer games and staying home."

"Nevertheless, the council can publicise the event a bit more to attract more young people to this wholesome activity, which benefits well on day-in-evening as a trend today. Like how it was back in the old days," Gabriel added.

MBKS member James Chan, who attended the event in the afternoon, said he would like to see kite flying become as popular as in Bantulu, where an annual international kite festival attracts enthusiasts and hobbyists from all over the world.
